About when did the city-state of Athens develop?
When did the Roman Republic begin?
How many years passed between the development of these two civilizations?
Our constitution does not copy the laws of neighbouring states; we are rather a pattern to others than imitators ourselves. Its administration favours the many instead of the few; this is why it is called a democracy. If we look to the laws, they afford equal justice to all in their private differences; if to social standing, advancement in public life falls to reputation for capacity, class considerations not being allowed to interfere with merit; nor again does poverty bar the way, if a man is able to serve the state, he is not hindered by the obscurity of his condition. The freedom which we enjoy in our government extends also to our ordinary life. There, far from exercising a jealous surveillance [close watch] over each other, we do not feel called upon to be angry with our neighbor for doing what he likes, or even to indulge in those injurious [harmful] looks which cannot fail to be offensive, although they inflict no positive penalty [actual harm]. But all this ease in our private relations does not make us lawless as citizens. Against this fear is our chief safeguard, teaching us to obey the magistrates and the laws, particularly such as regard the protection of the injured, whether they are actually on the statute book, or belong to that code which, although unwritten, yet cannot be broken without acknowledged disgrace.

—Pericles, Funeral Oration

What type of government was established in Athens? Was Pericles correct in saying that their constitution would serve as a pattern for others? Explain.
Who first instituted democracy in Athens after overthrowing the aristocrats? Who developed Athenian democracy to its greatest height? Explain.

How does the trial of Socrates reflect on Athenian democracy?
Who made up the Assembly? Who couldn’t participate?
What kind of democracy, based on who participated directly in the government, was established in Athens?
